

J.S. Bach - Church Cantatas BWV 70

Introduction & updates at melvinunger.com.

Regarding the adaptation of an Advent cantata for Trinity 26, see side note.

PART 1. Chorus - Recit (B) - Aria (A) - Recit (T) - Aria (S) - Recit (T) - Chorale.
PART 2. Aria (T) - Recit/chorale (B) - Aria (B) - Chorale.
An unknown librettist expanded Salomon's text for BWV 70a (a Bach cantata for the 2nd day of Advent (music lost) with recitatives (the Franck libretto had none) and an extra chorale to create a 2-part cantata libretto suitable for the 26th Sunday after Trinity. Pre-existing movements were modified only minimally. (In Leipzig, no cantatas were performed on the last 3 Sundays of Advent.) For a comparison of the two libretti, see Martin Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar" 1:688-693.

The text derives from the Gospel reading for the cantata's original liturgical designation, the second Sunday of Advent, Luke 21:36: [Christ]: "Watch at all times, praying that you may have strength to escape all these things that will take place, and to stand before the Son of man. (Also parallel passages in Mark 13:33 and Matthew 24:44.)

17. Text painting: The imperative "wachet!" (awake, or keep watch!) is set with ascending runs of sixteenth notes and fanfare-like wake-up calls.

The musical score is for a piece titled "Watch Ye Chet". It consists of five staves. The first four staves are vocal parts (Soprano, Alto, Tenor, and Bass) with lyrics. The fifth staff is a piano accompaniment. The key signature has one sharp (F#), and the time signature is 3/4. The lyrics are: "chet, be - tet, wa - ye, pray ye, watch". The piano accompaniment features chords in the right hand and a moving bass line in the left hand. The piece ends with a double bar line.

Alfred Dürr writes, "In the second movement, an accompagnato performed by the entire instrumental ensemble, Bach depicts in succession the terror of the sinner, the calm of the elect and their joy (lively coloraturas), the destruction of the universe, and finally the fear of those called before Christ's countenance, for whom the text announces consolation." See Alfred Dürr, "The Cantatas of J. S. Bach," translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 646.

Pervasive triplets almost always suggest joy and a more modern demeanor. In Bach's first Leipzig cantata cycle, examples include 44/3, 44/6, 70/2, 70/3, 104 (2 out of 6 movements have compound rhythms), 134/1, 184/1, 194/8.

The dramatic contrast between God's treatment of sinner vs. saint is emphasized by Heinrich Müller in a sermon for this Sunday, published in a book that was in Bach's library: Apostolische SchlußKett und Krafft-Kern, 5th rev. ed. (Frankfurt am Main: Balthasar Christoph Wust, Sen., 1701), pp. 351-57. See Robin Leaver, "The Valuation of Bach's Library" in Bach 9/2 (April, 1978): 29; Leaver, Bach's Theological Library (Neuhausen-Stuttgart: Hänssler, 1983), p. 13.

Text painting: Quaking figures return for reference to God's judgment, the text referencing the Epistle reading of the day: "2 Peter 3:10. The day of the Lord will come like a thief, and then the heavens will pass away with a loud noise, and the elements will be dissolved with fire, and the earth and the works that are upon it will be burned up."

Alfred Dürr writes, "The aria, no. 3, is accompanied by continuo only, but its instrumental bass is split up into a calm, supporting fundamental part and an additional part that figuratively breaks up the bass line [see full score]. This obbligato part was in 1723 played on the organ (with cello?), but in a 1731 revival by cello only, with organ, bassoon, and violone on the fundamental part. Ostinato effects arise from manifold repetitions in the instrumental parts. The voice takes up the instrumental head-motive and assimilates itself in rhythmic movement to the obbligato instrumental part. Livelier motion in the alto emphasizes individual words, such as 'fliehen' ('flee') or 'Feuer' ('fire'). See Alfred Dürr, The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 646.

The triplet rhythm apparently depicts "fleeing from from the "Sodom and Egypt" of this world, the text referencing the Israelites' exodus from Egypt, Lot and his family's flight out of Sodom (with the subsequent fiery judgment on Sodom and Gomorrah), and the Epistle of the day (see side note).

Il Basso marcato.

The movement is characterized by a continuous "traveling" bass line that rises and falls, which reflects the text's emphasis on leaving Egypt and Sodom. Especially striking are rising scales of nearly 2 octaves in the obbligato cello line.

(For the significance of D minor, see side note.)

In his vocal lines, Bach sometimes uses chromatic pitch saturation in 7 measures to depict the complete depravity of human nature (the number 7 representing "fullness" or "completeness" in the bible). Compare BWV 35/3, 48/2, 78/3, 105/2. Here in 70/4, the 12th pitch (G#) is supplied in measure 7 by the continuo.

The text alludes to the Epistle of the day: "You must understand this, that scoffers will come in the last days, following their own passions and saying, 'Where is the promise of his coming? For ever since the fathers fell asleep, all things have continued as they were from the beginning of creation.'" The poem's unusually static rhyme scheme of AAaaaaAA reinforces the text's emphasis on inevitability (2 Peter 3:3-4). The text is divided into 4(x2) +4(x2) lines (with repetitions).

In Bach's first Leipzig cantata cycle, instrumentally rendered chorale tunes (an additional hermeneutical layer introduced by the composer) appear in 25/1, 48/1, 70/9, 75/8, and 77/1.

The text's reference to the trumpet call of Judgment Day leads to the trumpet playing the 1586 chorale "Es ist gewißlich an der Zeit," a German paraphrase of the "Dies irae" by Bartolomäus Ringwaldt (1530–1599) to a 1565 tune. See Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar 1:697.

Listeners may have thought of the second stanza of the 7-stanza chorale because of its reference to the trumpet call.

Martin Petzoldt notes that Bach places the line of the presumed chorale stanza (that judgment is executed on the whole earth) right after judgment's pronouncement, signifying that judgment on (destruction of) the earth comes by God's utterance, just as the earth's creation did. See "Bach Kommentar 1:697.

Text painting: The words "hell's open door" is set with an ascending line of an octave and a half, starting from the singer's lowest note in the recitative just as the trumpet reaches its highest note. Martin Petzold suggests that this tonal distance signifies the wide reach of God's word of judgment. See Bach Kommentar 1:697.

The change to "lead me to thy chambers" reflects the Gospel reading of the cantata's new liturgical occasion, Matthew 25:34 [Christ]: Then the King will say to those at his right hand, "Come, O blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," but also passages such as Isaiah 32:18, John 14:1-3, and Revelation 21:1-4 (see side note).

Sighing duples for the longing referenced in the text.

Presumably BWV 70a had "stöhnet" (groans), as rendered in many hymnals of the day, instead of "sehnet" (years).

A 3-part "halo of strings" is added to 4 vocal lines in low register, resulting in a 7-part texture that expresses the text ("I yearn not for earth or heaven").

Petzoldt argues that the last 3 lines of the chorale function as a catechismal statement, making is applicable to the Eucharist, which occurred at this point in the liturgy. See "Bach Kommentar 1:699.

NBA: freiet (frees). Presumably BWV 70a had "frei macht" (makes free). as rendered in hymnals of the day der mich frei macht vom Ge - richt, mei - nen Je - sum lass' ich nicht.

 from His judg - ment set me free; Je - sus mine, I cling to Thee,
 Who frees me from judgment; I will not let my Jesus go.

der mich frei macht vom Gericht, mei - nen Je - sum lass' ich nicht.
 from His judg - ment set me free; Je - sus mine, I cling to Thee.

der mich frei macht vom Ge - richt, mei - nen Je - sum lass' ich nicht.
 from His judg - ment set me free; Je - sus mine, I cling to Thee.

der mich frei macht vom Ge - richt, mei - nen Je - sum lass' ich nicht.
 from His judg - ment set me free; Je - sus mine, I cling to Thee.
