

J.S. Bach - Form: Chorus/Fantasia - Recit (B) - Aria (T) - Chorale (SATB) - RECIT (A) - Aria (B) - Aria (A) - Recit (T) - Chorale (SATB).

BWV 117 is a chorale cantata that retains the chorale text in each movement (per omnes versus). For more about Bach's chorale cantatas that follow this model, see note. The underlying chorale first appeared 1675 as a supplement to a religious pamphlet, published anonymously. The author, Johann Jakob Schütz (1640–1690), was a Pietist and was therefore not acknowledged in print. See Martin Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar 1:331–332 and note for more. The chorale is unified with motto-like repetition of the final line: "Gebt unserm Gott die Ehre! (Give our God the glory!), a quotation from the "Song of Moses" at the end of his life in Deuteronomy 32:3. Both chorale and Bach's composition are chiastic (x-shaped/symmetrical). In chiastic forms, center movements (where the mirror image begins) provide the crux of the matter. Bach achieves further structural unification by presenting the chorale in simple, four-part form in the fourth movement, making further reference to it in the following two movements, and finally repeating the opening chorale fantasia at the end.

singing in solemn tranquillity and measured polyphony. The participation of flutes and oboes as well as strings and the lively semiquaver motion of the continuo lend the instrumental texture a colourful hue." See Alfred Dürr, The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 786. The melody is not the one by Johann Crüger usually associated with this text but a 15th-century anonymous tune associated with "Es ist das Heil uns kommen her" (see also the very different BWV 9/1).

Bach gives special attention to the final line by stating it 3 times (probably a Trinitarian reference), repeating it in the lower voices with more animation, allowing the ritornello to sneak in prematurely, "giving rise to a brilliant interlocking of the last chorale line and the ritornello." See Alfred Dürr, The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 786. Martin Petzoldt notes that this line, a quotation of Deuteronomy 32:3, is also the biblical basis for the initials "SDG (Soli Deo Gloria)" that Bach added at the ends of his scores. See Bach Kommentar, 1:333.

Bach gives special attention to the final (motto) line by stating it 4 times in a lilting arioso, the expansion taking up half of the movement. Martin Petzoldt notes that the number 4 is often associated with the created world. Here 4 regions of the created order are mentioned: heaven (line 1), earth, air, and sea. Other earth-related associations are the 4 cardinal directions, the 4 times of day, and the 4 seasons). See Bach Kommentar 1:334.

As in no. 7, the text is in the first person, strengthening the existential urgency. See Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar 1:335. The high tessitura expresses the desperation of the text.

(Verse 4) •Praise to God for help when I cried to him in need (117/4). The chorale stanza alludes to various Psalm verses, e.g., Psalm 120:1: In my distress I cry to the Lord (Luther 1545: Ich rufe zu dem Herrn in meiner Not); Psalm 5:2: Hearken to the sound of my cry (Luther 1545: Vernimm mein Schreien).

Bach places the cantional setting of the chorale (which usually comes last) in the interior of the cantata, perhaps because the modal melody suggests a somber text and the 4th stanza is the least joyful in the chorale.

Alfred Dürr suggests that the cantata was probably performed in 2 parts, with movements 1–4 performed before the sermon, 5–9 after the sermon. See The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, 785–786.

This is the central (pivot) movement in the cantata's chiastic form. Usually, such central movements feature the meeting or inversion of antithetical elements (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). In this chorale stanza, the author stresses God's abiding presence in negative terms: God has never yet forsaken his people. The divine presence is represented by a "halo" of strings in the recitative sections.

4. The text is reminiscent of biblical passages such as Isaiah 46:3–4: [You] who have been borne by me from your birth, carried from the womb; even to your old age...I will carry you; Deuteronomy 32:12: The Lord alone did lead (Luther 1545: leitete) [his people]...

singing in solemn tranquillity and measured polyphony. The participation of flutes and oboes as well as strings and the lively semiquaver motion of the continuo lend the instrumental texture a colourful hue." See Alfred Dürr, The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 786.

The beginning of the chorale stanza allusion to Psalm 100:1–2: Make a joyful noise to the Lord, all the lands! Serve the Lord with gladness! Come into his presence with singing! (Also Psalm 66:1, 81:1–2, 98:4–6.)

20. Organ: The organ part consists of two manuals. The upper manual plays eighth-note chords in G7, C major, D7, and G major. The lower manual (pedal) plays eighth-note chords in D pedal...
Basso continuo: The basso continuo part consists of two bassoon staves. It plays eighth-note chords in G7, C major, D7, and G major.

24. Soprano. Line 1.

The melody is not presented as a cantus firmus in augmentation as is more usually the case.
The lower voices largely accompany.

Soprano: The soprano part begins with "So kom - met vor sein An - ge -". A red box highlights "Stollen 1 of chorale's bar form."
Alto: The alto part follows with the same lyrics.
Tenor: The tenor part follows with the same lyrics.
Basso: The basso part follows with the same lyrics.
Violins: The violins play eighth-note chords in hemiola (three eighth notes per measure).
Oboes: The oboes play eighth-note chords in hemiola.
Flutes: The flutes play eighth-note chords in hemiola.
Concertante exchange...: The vocal parts sing "So kom - met vor sein An - ge -" while the instruments play eighth-note chords.
G major: The key signature changes to G major.
G7: The key signature changes to G7.
C major: The key signature changes to C major.

28.

Soprano: The soprano part sings "sicht," four times in a row.
Alto: The alto part sings "sicht," four times in a row.
Tenor: The tenor part sings "sicht," four times in a row.
Basso: The basso part sings "sicht," four times in a row.
Continuo: The continuo part consists of two bassoon staves. It plays eighth-note chords in C major, D7, G major, G7, and C major.

The Abgesang ("Gott hat es alles wohl bedacht und alles, alles recht gemacht") paraphrases Mark 7:37: "He has done all things well" (Luther 1545: Er hat alles wohl gemacht)—the people's response to Jesus' healing of the deaf and speech-impaired man in the Gospel reading for the 12th Sunday after Trinity (supporting the suggestion that the cantata may have been intended for that occasion).

Bach gives special attention to the final line by stating it 3 times (probably a Trinitarian reference), repeating it in the lower voices with more animation, allowing the ritonello to sneak in prematurely, "giving rise to a brilliant interlocking of the last chorale line and the ritornello." See Alfred Dürr, The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 786. Martin Petzoldt notes that this line, a quotation of Deuteronomy 32:3, is also the biblical basis for the initials "SDG (Soli Deo Gloria)" that Bach added at the ends of his scores. See Bach Kommentar, 1:333.
