Change of Town Council (BWV 71, 119, 193, 120, 29, 69).

The sitting council was replaced by a dormant council (see notes).

Librettist: Unknown

FP: 30 August 1723 (first Monday after St. Batholomew's Day (August 24) at St. Nicholas.

The sermon was preached by the pastor of St. Nicholas,

Friedrich Wilhelm Schütz (1677–1739), whose Monday sermons were moving sequentially through the Old Testament.

On 30 August, he had reached Genesis 22:24. The sermon has not survived (see note for more).

The cantata is in chiastic form. Bach often used chiastic (x-shaped/symmetrical) forms, in which center movements (where the mirror image begins) provide the crux of the matter. There antithetical elements meet or are paradoxically inverted (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). See note for more. This imposing work calls for an unusually large festive orchestra: 4 trumpets, timpani, 2 recorders, 3 oboes, strings, and a large continuo group. The grand opening choral movement is in the style of a French overture: two sections for instruments alone frame an allegro section in 12/8 meter. (It is noteworthy that Bach chose to open his later chorale cantata cycle with a chorale fantasia in French Overture style [BWV 20].) For Alfred Dürr's comments on the cantata, see note.

J.S. Bach

(Probably adapted from a pre-existing instrumental work)

•Praise God for blessing Jerusalem: Psalm 147:12–14 (119/1).

(Coro.) If the movement existed previously as an instrumental movement, the middle section may have been radically redesigned or even newly composed (Alfred Dürr, Bach-Jahrbuch 1986, p. 120, cited in Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar, 3:205).

The head motive is adapted in the following movement.

A (Allegro  $\text{d} = 144$ )

Basso.

42 Alfred Dürr notes that the middle section of a French Overture "according to widespread tradition, should be designed as a fugue but is here treated largely in homophony, with imitation restricted to the outer parts, bass and soprano." See Alfred Dürr, The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 729.

Martin Petzoldt notes that the Psalm verse touches on 3 most important political issues: protecting the citizenry, creating internal blessing, and securing external peace—with the contemporaneous theological understanding that all three involve both human effort and divine help. See Bach Kommentar, 1:205–207.

The opening phrase (which is derived from the head motive of the previous movement) acts as a structural frame. When it returns at the end of the movement, its 2 constituent musical motives are stated in reverse order.

A musical score page showing a vocal line and piano accompaniment. The vocal line continues from the previous page with lyrics: "kann er ei-ne Stadt mit rei-chern Nach-druck segnen, als wo er Güt' und". The piano accompaniment features a bass line with sustained notes and chords. The key signature changes between A7 and D minor.

The order of the two motives are reversed.

Alfred Dürr observes that the scoring of this aria has a "pronounced emphasis on the middle register, [giving] the movement a mild, even warm sound, which is enhanced still more by the song-like, approachable melody." See The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, translatee by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005).

Nº 3. Aria. • Consider God's blessing on city of Linden-trees (119/3).

119/3. 1. (Andante = 66.) Ob da caccia II Throughout, the oboes da caccia imitate each other.

Question of performance practice: whether to assimilate the rhythms (double dot the bass, later, coordinate with the triplets).

Helmuth Rilling suggests the "two low oboes da caccia give a special color and mood to the piece. Their pastoral-like tune seems to depict contented people strolling through the linden-lined streets of Leipzig." (See Helmuth Rilling, The Oregon Bach Festival Master Class Lectures, vol. 3 (Dayton, Ohio: Roger Dean Publishing, 2001), p. 147.)

The poetic couplet that begins the middle section of the aria appears to derive from the opening of an anonymous 1676 hymn, set musically in 1691 by Johann Löhner (1645–1705): "Alles ist an Gottes Segen und an seiner Gnad' gelegen." ("All depends on God's blessing and his grace").

Martin Petzoldt sees the two trumpet flourishes as an expression of the "town's self-confidence and prosperity as a result of God's 'choosing.' There was reason for such self-confidence, as the town had only regained its economic independence 35 years earlier, after having been under curatorship due to an economic collapse between 1627 and 1688. The reason for this was the purchase of the Mansfeld mines shortly before the outbreak of the Thirty Years' War, which caused a financial disaster." See Bach Kommentar 3:109 for German original.

Martin Petzoldt argues that, for the librettist, recognizing human government as a divine gift for which thanksgiving is owed not to human rulers but to God was an important theme. See especially Petzoldt's comments on movements 4 and 6 (Bach Kommentar 3:210, 212, 216).

This is the central (pivot) movement in the cantata's chiastic form, where antithetical elements meet or are paradoxically inverted (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). Human government is identified here as the "image" ("mirror") of God, a concept derived from Romans 13:1–4 (see note).

Martin Petzoldt suggests that the delicate, trio texture and the triple meter may symbolize the Trinity's authority behind human authority (see note).

The delicate instrumentation of 2 recorders playing in unison, together with the rocking 6/8 meter is surprising. It suggests an intimate, pastoral perspective on divine and human government, and appears to reflect Bach's interest in Luther's

G minor (for significance, see note).

Theology of the Cross, which is fundamentally based on the paradoxical inversion of one's expectations (see note).

As the axis in the cantata's structure, this movement embodies that inversion.

A fugue with ascending order of entries represents praise directed toward God. The fugue subject's beginning is reminiscent of the chorale "Nun danket alle Gott," which is based on Sirach (Apocrypha) 50:22: Now thank we all God, who does great things in every place, who preserves us alive from the womb and does all good things for us (Luther 1545, v. 24: Nun danket alle Gott, der große Dinge tut an allen Enden, der uns von Mutterleib an lebendig erhält und tut uns alle Gute). The cantata text mixes the Sirach passage with Psalm 126:3: The Lord has done great things for us; we are glad.
