4. S. after Epiphany (BWV 81, 14)

*Romans 13:8-10 (Love is the fulfilling of the law)

*Matthew 8:23-27 (Jesus calms the sea.)

Librettist: Unknown

FP: 30 Jan. 1735 (St. Thomas). See side note.

Note: Since there was no 4th S. after Epiphany in 1724 (when Bach was writing the chorale cantata cycle) this work was apparently intended to fill that gap in the liturgical calendar.

See note for more.

One of Bach's last surviving church cantatas.

The libretto finds its basis in 1) Luther's chorale, which paraphrases Psalm 124, and 2) the Gospel reading, which is the account of Jesus calming the sea (see note).

Pianoforte

(Coro) (Larghetto $\text{d} = 92$) (Chorale, v. 1) •God's children lost without his aid: Luther's poetic version of Psalm 124:1-3 (14/1). Luther's 3-stanza chorale was popular, being assigned to many Sundays of the year (see Martin Petzoldt, "Bach-Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 517).

Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 517).

Unsre Stärke heißt zu schwach,

Unser Feind zu widerstehen.

Stünd uns nicht der Höchste bei,

Würd uns ihre Tyrannie

Bald bis an das Leben gehen.

Gott, bei deinem starken Schützen

Sind wir vor den Feinden frei.

Wenn sie sich als wilde Wellen

Uns aus Grimm entgegenstellen,

Steht uns deine Hände bei.

Movement 1 is in the style of a chorale motet (no ritornello), a counter-fugue in which statements derived from the chorale alternate with their inversions, followed by instrumental statements of the chorale line. The reversal of roles between voices & instruments reflects the reversal of fortune expressed in the text. Compare structure of BWV 80/1, written not long afterward. See side note for more.

Text painting: Each statement is answered by its inversion; in this way it depicts the sentiment of the text (expressed in the subjunctive mood): "Were God not with us, the opposite would have happened" = reversal of fortune. The chromatic harmonic language—arising from the (traditionally variable) B /B' in the chorale tune—portrays the torment implied.

127 Harmonic instability mm. 128–150.

The musical score consists of five staves. The top three staves are for voice (soprano, alto, tenor) and the bottom two are for piano. The vocal parts sing a four-line German poem: "ar - mes Häuf - lein sind, die so _ ein ar - - - mes but a fee - ble band, for we were but a fee - - -". The piano part features a continuous bass line with various chords. Yellow circles highlight specific notes in the piano's bass line at the beginning of each measure, corresponding to the harmonic changes indicated by the red labels below. The harmonic progression is as follows:

Modified da capo form.

14/2. Aria •Murderous foe too strong for our small strength if God had not been with us (14/2). The theme of "God with us" (God's presence with his followers in the face of opposition) was commonly stressed on this Sunday, relating particularly to a statement in the Gospel reading's parallel account in Mark 4:36: "[The disciples] took him [i.e., Jesus] with them in the boat, just as he was...". See Martin Petzoldt, "Bach-Kommentar," vol. 2, pp. 519, 521.

(Allegro moderato $\text{d} = 84$)

Instrumentation:
Virtuosic corno da caccia with strings.
Here the horn appears to have military associations, and its fanfare motive symbolizes strength, so that the focus is on God's strength rather than on the human weakness referenced in the text.

Triple meter suits the rhythm of the text.

B-flat major (The only movement in the major mode).

Mm. 1–4 (repeated as an echo in mm. 5–8) are derived from the vocal opening. For an explanation of the "strength" and "opposition" figures, see below.

Martin Petzoldt suggests that the idea of "strength in weakness," alludes to 2 Corinthians 12:9–10: "The Lord said to me, "...My power is made perfect in weakness. I will all the more gladly boast of my weaknesses, that the power of Christ may rest upon me...for when I am weak, then I am strong." See "Bach-Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 522.

Musical score for piano, page 10, measures 65-66. The score consists of two staves. The top staff shows a treble clef, a key signature of one flat, and a common time signature. The bottom staff shows a bass clef, a key signature of one flat, and a common time signature. Measure 65 begins with a forte dynamic. Measure 66 begins with a half note followed by a fermata. The text "B-flat 7" is written below the bass staff, and "E-flat major" is written below the treble staff.

Musical score for orchestra, page 72, measures 1-2. The score includes parts for Violin 1, Violin 2, Viola, Cello, Double Bass, Flute, Clarinet, Bassoon, Horn (labeled "Corno"), and Percussion. The key signature is one flat (F#), and the time signature is common time. Measure 1 starts with a forte dynamic. Measure 2 begins with a piano dynamic. The vocal part consists of two staves: the top staff in soprano range and the bottom staff in alto range. The vocal line features eighth-note patterns. The piano part provides harmonic support with sustained notes and eighth-note chords. The percussion part includes a bass drum and cymbals.

Musical score for orchestra and piano, page 76, measures 1-2. The score consists of five staves. The top two staves are for the orchestra, featuring woodwind parts (Flute, Oboe, Clarinet, Bassoon) and a bassoon part. The bottom three staves are for the piano. The vocal part is written in German. The key signature is E-flat major. The vocal line begins with a melodic line in measure 1, followed by a lyrical phrase in measure 2. The piano accompaniment provides harmonic support throughout both measures.

This is an editorial realization of a secco recitative (only voice and continuo lines are original). Nevertheless, the scalar runs in the continuo line require coordination with the voice, suggesting a certain degree of rhythmic regularity in the manner of an arioso. Text painting: Scalar figures of 32nd notes in the continuo depict the attacks of the enemy, which are described as raging, life-threatening torrents of water. Chromatic writing and modulatory sequences that result in cadences on a wide variety of keys reflect the turmoil described in the text. The text is based on stanza 2 of Luther's chorale, which itself is a paraphrase of Psalm 124:1–5: "If it had not been the Lord who was on our side...when men rose up against us, then they would have swallowed us up alive, when their anger was kindled against us; then the flood would have swept us away, the torrent would have gone over us; then over us would have gone the raging waters." The image of a life-threatening storm at sea comes directly from the day's Gospel reading, where Jesus calms the sea, saving the disciples from death.

Two oboes in concertante-like interplay with a thematically free vocal line. By having one oboe "come alongside" the other, Bach may be making reference to the frequently emphasized theme for this Sunday: the theme of "God with us" (God's presence with his followers in the face of opposition) related particularly to a statement in the Gospel reading's parallel account in Mark 4:36: "[The disciples] took him [i.e., Jesus] with them in the boat, just as he was...." See Martin Petzoldt, "Bach-Kommentar," vol. 2, pp. 519, 521. This duality is also evident in the interaction between the continuo bass and one or the other of the contrapuntal lines (Ob I, Ob II, vocal bass). If Ob I symbolizes the psalmist and Ob II represents "God coming alongside," the crossing of the two parts at the end of the first ritornello may signify divine triumph.

The text is set in a manner that allows various words or syllables to be stressed by placing them on strong beats.

Opposition to foes is depicted with syncopation and suspension over the barline (accents against the meter)—similar to the writing at the end of the opening chorus, in the soprano aria and in closing chorale—with "frei" (free) coming on a strong beat. As a result, the song-like demeanor of the vocal line has an undertone of defiance (Petzoldt, vol. 2, p. 523).

Modulation to D minor suggests a degree of unrest; in the free da capo, this section stays in G minor (see m. 80). D minor is of particular interest, since Martin Luther equated the second tone (apparently referring to the hypodorian mode) with "poor, weak sinner." Eyolf Østrem documents various iterations of Luther's statements. See Østrem, Eyolf, "Luther, Josquin und des finken gesang" in "The Arts and the Cultural Heritage of Martin Luther" (special issue of the journal Transfiguration, "Nordic Journal of Christianity and the Arts," replaces issue 4/1), ed. Nils Holger Petersen (Museum Tusculanum, 2002): 61. Eric Chafe understands the term in this way, writing simply that Luther "called the Dorian mode an analog of 'poor weak sinner' because of its use of the variable B fa/mi." (See "Analyzing Bach Cantatas" (New York: Oxford University Press, 2000), p. 267n33 and p. 98 (where he writes "hypodorian").

Ob I repeats its line (mm. 51–52 = mm. 53–54). Text painting: To depict the foe "set against/opposed to" the Christian, Bach sets the octave leaping figure as root of chord (voice) against seventh (Oboe I), with leaps moving in the opposite direction. The knocking figure is accentuated in the oboe lines.

Martin Petzoldt finds the theological foundation of "freedom" in John 8:36: "If the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed. He suggests Philippians 2:9–11 as a biblical source for the "exalted name of Christ": "God has highly exalted him and bestowed on him the name which is above every name...." A biblical source for relying on the name of God is Psalm 20:7 (verse 8 in the English bible): "Some boast of chariots, and some of horses; but we boast of the name of the Lord our God." See "Bach-Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 524–25.
